On August 7, 2009 Michael McDill (36 year old father of two young children) was diagnosed with Stage IV Non-Small Cell Lung Cancer. He is a “Never Smoker” and does not work in an industry where exposure to environmental toxins is high. He is just a man who was diagnosed with lung cancer and is battling it now like “Superman”. Ten rounds of chemo, 30 rounds of radiation helped him to keep his cancer stable this past year. On August 26, he heard the news that the cancer had spread to the left side lymph nodes in his chest. He has been enrolled in a promising clinical trial at The Vanderbilt-Ingram Cancer Center at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, TN.
